Headline:
Rain for some overnight, turning showery on Thursday.

This Evening and Tonight:
Dry to start for most areas, although some fading showers in the north. However rain in the far west will move northeastwards overnight, perhaps staying dry in some northeastern parts. The rain could be heavy at times in the west. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Thursday:
A murky start with patchy rain turning showery later in the morning. Some of the showers are expected to become heavy and perhaps thundery, especially in western parts. Cool. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Often cloudy with showers, perhaps heavy, on Friday. Heavy showers with a risk of thunder on Saturday and Sunday, although with some sunny spells. Cool throughout.
